THURSDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 19, 1833.

THE CROSS CUT CANAL.—The Baltimore American, after noticing the dissatisfaction existing at New Lisbon, on account of the selection of the Mahoning rout, has the following remarks, which are equally characterized by sound sense and good feeling:

"It would be a pity that any serious dissensions should arise to prevent the early completion of so desirable an improvement. We have, on several occasions referred to it, principally with a view of pointing out the unnatural obstacles at this extremity of the line of Canal, in order that at such a favorable opportunity, an effort might be made to remove them for the common benefit of the whole interior of Pennsylvania and Ohio. But whether that effort be made or not, we are not the less sensible of the value of the proposed junction, and anxious for its success. Nor do we scruple to add, that we shall look upon its success as an assurance of the future completion of the whole line of communication to tide water on the Chesapeake."

"Independent, therefore, of that general interest which we have in the success of all plans for improving the face of our country, and augmenting its prosperity, we have a further particular interest in wishing ample success to the proposed junction at Pittsburgh."

We were pleased to see these observations, because they show that the intelligent editor of that paper has taken a correct view of this matter, and already perceives that Baltimore has a direct interest in the completion of every improvement which tends to attract the products of the Lake country to Pittsburgh.

Every article which shall hereafter be conveyed to Pittsburgh by this cross cut canal, will have traveled the whole of that distance in a direct line towards Baltimore, as well as towards Philadelphia. It will be a fair subject of competition, and it will be possible for Baltimore to obtain a large portion of such articles by means either of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, or the Rail Road to Pittsburgh, or by some improvement to intersect the Pennsylvania Improvements between Harrisburg and Columbia. On the other hand, if the products of the Lake country once pass down the lake to Buffalo or the Welland canal, they are equally and forever lost to Baltimore as well as to Philadelphia. At Cleveland, Philadelphia and Baltimore are joint competitors, for the Lake trade, against New York; at Pittsburgh, New York being out of the question, Philadelphia and Baltimore become rival competitors for this same trade.

It is a possible case that Baltimore may find it her interest to extend a rail road, by the way of Wheeling, or Wellsburg, or Steubenville, to the Ohio Canal, but it is scarcely possible that this would draw to her any portion of the Lake trade. —Baltimore may possibly get a portion of the Ohio trade by extending her rail road to that canal; but if she ever gets any portion of the Lake trade, she must take it after it reaches Pittsburgh.

It should be borne in mind, also, that the rail road cannot reach the Ohio at any point so far north as Wheeling, without passing through Pennsylvania; and, in that event, the company are bound to make a branch at least to Pittsburgh.—We do not think it at all probable that this company, whose stock, with sixty five dollars paid, only sells for twenty two to twenty five dollars, will ever undertake to make both a road to Wheeling or Steubenville, and a branch to this city; the editor of the American will no doubt agree with us on this point.—Pittsburgh is the nearest point on the Ohio, to Baltimore, and is also almost in a direct line between Pittsburgh and Cleveland.

The concluding sentence of the first of the above paragraphs, we take it, is marked by sound good sense and wise forethought. If this cross cut canal is once completed, the Pennsylvania canal will soon be found insufficient to transport the immense products which will be collected here, and the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, and the Baltimore rail road, will be forced to completion, and will all have as much business as can be done on them.

☞ We publish, to day, the account of the visit of the Correspondent of the N. York American, to Braddock's Field. It will be found interesting.

Extract of a letter to the Editor, dated
HARRISBURGH, Dec. 16, 1833.

"The bill to recharter the Bank of Pittsburgh, passed to day, on a third reading, and is sent to the Senate—I think it will pass that body without much alteration.

"Mr. Findlay, of Westmoreland, (our present Speaker,) has been appointed Secretary of the Commonwealth, in place of Sam'l M'Kean, elected to the United States' Senate. We shall have to elect a Speaker to morrow.

"John S. Riddle and Elihu Chauncey, were elected Directors of the Bank of Pennsylvania, on the first ballot. Francis Shoemaker and Paul S. Brown were elected Directors of the Bank of Philadelphia, on the second ballot."

From the New York American.
NOVEMBER 10.

It was a bright bracing autumnal morning, as I rode out of Pittsburgh, with a party of gentlemen, for "Braddock's Field." Our rout followed the course of the river; sometimes keeping the rich bottom on its borders, and again ascending a hilly ridge, which always commanded some varied view of that stream, conducted here by steep hills, whose shadows met as they slept upon its quiet bosom, and expanding there into a small lake, apparently so completely landlocked, that it seems not a part of the bright current you can see flashing through those meadows further on. After catching more than one glimpse like this of the landscape behind us, whose sunny fields contrasted beautifully with the dense smoke of Pittsburgh in the back ground, we struck into a ravine, cutting the road hitherto pursued, at right angles. Winding now through a deep dingle, where the path side was festooned with vines, we crossed a small brook, and reached the shore of tke Monongahela, opposite to a broad, alluvial flat, whose high cultivation and sunny aspect contrasted vividly with the wild and secluded dell, from the mouth of which we beheld it. The road next led for some distance through a wood, on the immediate bank of the river, and then, gaining the more public highway, we found ourselves, after passing several comfortable farm houses, immediately in front of the battle ground.

It is cut up now by three or four enclosures—the field upon which the fight was hottest, lying nearly in the centre, bounded on one side by the road, and having its opposite extremity about a quarter of a mile from the river, with a wooded flat intervening. Beyond this flat is the ford over which Braddock passed. The ground, about three hundred yards from the ford, rises in a gradual slope, for some two hundred yards more, and then swells suddenly into a tolerably steep hill, the summit of which may be half a mile from the river. On the middle slope, lies the central field of action, to which I have already alluded. It is seamed with two shallow ravines, which run parallel with each other towards the river, and are about gunshot apart.

In these ravines, concealed by the underwood, and protected by the trunks of trees, felled for the purpose, lay the French and Indian force. It amounted, according to the best accounts, to only 500 men, and was commanded by a subaltern officer, who suggested this ambuscade as a desperate expedient to save Fort Du Quesne from the overwhelming force that was about to invest it.—The road of Braddock lay immediately between these enfilading parties.

It was about mid day when he passed his troops over the river, in detachments of two hundred and five hundred, followed by the column of artillery, the baggage, and the main body of the army, commanded by himself in person.—The latter had hardly time to form upon the flat below, when quick fire in front told them that the two detachments which had gained the first slope, were already engaged. Their comrades advanced in double quick step to sustain them; but the whole five hundred gave way, and, falling back upon the advancing troops, struck panic and dismay throughout the ranks in a moment.—The confusion seemed, for a while, irremediable. Some fired off their ammunition without aim or object, and others, deaf to the commands and exhortations of their officers, flung away their arms, and gave themselves up at once to despair.

Burning with the disgrace, and eager to shame their soldiers into better conduct, the British officers advanced singly and in squads among the bullets of the enemy. They were slaughtered, indeed, like sheep, but their men, whose retreat had been partially cut off by the river, rallied at the galling sight, and, after the cool determination of young Washington, who had already had two horses shot under him, and his clothes pierced with bullets, had imparted some steadiness to their feelings, they seemed ready to protract the fight to the best advantage. The madness of Braddock, however, whose weak mind took fire at the idea of receiving a lesson from a provincial youth of three and twenty, destroyed every remaining chance of success. He insisted upon his men forming on the spot, and advancing in regular platoon against an enemy which none of them could see. Line after line, they would hardly attain a pace between the fatal ravines before they would be mowed down like grass. But their courage was now up, and, though broken and in some disorder, they attempted, with courageous pertinacity, to secure each step they gained by protecting themselves behind the trees, and returning the murderous fire of the foe after his own fashion. The military coxcomb, who commanded this ill fated band, would not hear of this. He stamped, raved, and swore, called his men cowards, and struck them with his sword.—In the mean time, an evolution was being executed, in another part of the field, which might yet have turned the fate of the day. Capt. Waggoner, of the Virginia forces, pushed his fine corps, consisting of 80 men, beyond the voice of his besotted commander, to the summit of the hill, with the loss of only three men, in running the fearful gauntlet he did to attain that position. A fallen tree here protected his brave little force, and enabled him to rake the ravines, which lay at right angles to his natural breastwork, to great advantage. But the Virginians were mistaken, by their English friends below, for a new enemy, and fired upon so furiously that they were compelled to retreat from their position, with the loss of two thirds of the corps, killed by their misguided comrades. Thus was the strife protracted for nearly three hours, when the fall of Braddock, after losing 700 men and 40 officers, put an end to the blind conflict. Fifteen hundred men, being thrice the number of the foe engaged, escaped to tell the havoc of the day, and spread consternation and horror throughout the province.

The military chest of the British, containing £25,000, fell into the hands of the enemy, as did, likewise, an extensive train of artillery, with ammunition and provisions to a large amount. Among those who perished on this disastrous occasion, were Sir Wm. Shirley, a son of the Governor of New York, and Sir Peter Halket, with one of his sons, and other officers of distinction or promise. Sir John St. Clair and Lieut. Col. Gage, afterwards well known in our revolutionary history, were among the wounded. Many of the officers fell at the first onset, but Braddock himself had advanced some distance up the hill when he received the mortal wound of which he died a day or two afterwards. The stump of the tree against which he leaned, after being struck, is still pointed out, in a wheat field, above the highway. He was carried off, as you recollect, by the flying troops, and dying, with many others, on the march, was buried beneath the road over which his men were retreating.

The letters of Horace Walpole, recently published, have thrown a light upon Braddock's character that should put an end at once to all the forbearance that has hitherto been exercised in commenting upon his share in this bloody transaction. The misfortunes of the hot and misguided, but high bred and gallant soldier, were to be touched upon with lenity. The selfish rashness and utter destitution of military capacity of the broken down gambler should be stagmatized as they deserve. Yet it is not from Walpole alone that we learn what a presumptuous blockhead England sent hither to mend his ruined fortunes, at the risk of the best blood in the country. For, though history has dealt so leniently with his character, the records of those times paint the man in his true colors, and so gross was his ignorance, and so offensive his pride, that he seems to have been hated and despised from the moment he assumed the command of the forces destined hither. The interest with which I viewed the battle ground, has kept me all the morning looking over a mass of documents relating to those times, and, as they are still before me, I am tempted to make more than one extract. "We have a general," writes the brave and accomplished Sir William Shirley, from the camp of Cumberland, to his friend, Governor Morris, at Philadelphia, "we have a general most judiciously chosen for being disqualified for the service he is employed in, in almost every respect. I am greatly disgusted at seeing an expedition, (as it is called,) so ill concerted originally in England, so ill appointed, and so improperly conducted since in America. I shall be very happy to have to retract hereafter what I have said, and submit to be censured as moody and apprehensive. I hope, my dear Morris, to spend a tolerable winter with you at Philadelphia." Poor Shirely, he never saw that winter. He was shot through the brain at the very commencement of the battle.

There is a lively comment on this letter in the well known reply of Braddock to the prudent suggestions of Washington previous to the battle:—"By G—d, Sir, these are high times, when a British General is to take counsel from a Virginia buckskin."

But the speech of an Indian Chief before the council of Pennsylvania, preserved among the records of Harrisburg, offers an illustration still more striking. "Brothers," said the sagacious ally of the colonists, "it is well known to you how unhappily we have been defeated by the French on Monongahela. We must let you know that it was of the pride and ignorance of that great General that came from England. He is now dead; but he was a bad man when he was alive. He looked upon us as dogs, and would never hear anything that was said to him. We often endeavored to advise him, and to tell him of the danger he was in with his soldiers. But he never appeared pleased with us, and that was the reason that a great many of our warriors left him, and would not be under his command. Brothers, we advise you not to give up the point, though we have in a measure been chastised from above.—But let us unite our strength. You are very numerous, and all the Governors along your eastern shores can raise men enough.—Don't let those that come over the great seas be concerned any more. They are unfit to fight in the woods. Let us go by ourselves—we that come out of this ground. We may be assured to conquer the French." The military counsel and support of this intrepid and high souled Chieftain would have been heard at least, even if it did not prevail, in the camp of Napoleon. Does it not make you indignant to think how it was trampled upon and insulted by such a creature as Braddock? One would have thought that the insolent spirit of the London debauchee would have felt rebuked into nothingness before the genius of the warrior of the woods. But let the man rest; he had that one virtue to which all weak minds bow—courage. And he had the Hessians, that in a subsequent war were brought to fight against us for eighteen pence a day. May we rather meet, again and again, such brave mercenaries in battle, than be marshalled once to the fight by a leader, whom even valor cannot shelter from deserved contempt.

The field of this celebrated action presents of course a very different appearance from what it did when Braddock's followers were here hunted through the forest. It is however but a few years since the wood was cut from the side hill, and traces of the conflict are still occasionally discovered in the grove along the margin of the river below. I was told too that bones and bullets, with rusted knives, hatchets and bayonets, were sometimes even yet turned up by the plough in the spot where the fight was hottest. This central field was cleared about 17 years since. It was heavily timbered at the time, and they tell in the neighborhood that the teeth of the saws in the mills adjacent were continually broken upon the balls imbedded in the ancient trees. Incredible quantities of human bones and rust eaten weapons are said to have been found beneath the surface of the soil, when the plough first invaded this memorable wood. I picked up a bone myself, which my horse's hoof disengaged from the soil, but my skill in anatomy not being even sufficient to determine whether it was even human or not, I returned the mouldering relic to the dust, of which it was rapidly becoming a part. It was an animated and interesting hour's amusement, after our party had taken down the intermediate fences, which were too high to clear, to gallop over the whole battle ground, and survey it from every point. A prettier spot to fight on never greeted the eye of a soldier. The undulations of the field are just sufficient to exercise a nice military discrimination in the choice of position, while the ground is yet so little broken that cavalry might act on any part of it to advantage. The centre of the battle field would command a fine view of the river, were but a vista or two cut in the wood below; and even now it offers a beautiful scite for a private residence, and would with the lands adjacent, make a noble park. There are a few superb oaks still standing at the foot of the slope, which might constitute a lawn, and—what must enhance the value of the place with all faithful ghost believers and pious lovers of the marvellous—the dim form of the red savage, with a ghastly spectre of his pallid victim shrieking before it, it is said, may be seen gliding at times among these hoary trunks. The exorcising light of noon most perversely shone down among them, while I lingered near the spot, but I could fancy that the November wind, which sighed among their branches, was charged, at times, with a wailing sound, such—such in fact as an orthodox tree, in a perfect state of health, would never make of its own accord.

Returning home, one of the party proposed stopping at a gentleman's house, in the vicinity, where a number of articles, picked up from the field, were said to be collected. Not a soul of us knew the tne proprietor of the establishment, and it would have amused you to see the effect produced upon its inmates, whom I soon ascertained to be a large collection of boarding school young ladies, by our formidable descent upon the premises. We were asked into a handsome parlor, and in about 15 minutes our host appeared. A gentleman, of our number, whose western frankness of manner, and ease of expression, made him the most suitable spokesman, at such an awkward meeting, opened the preliminaries, and apologizing for our unceremonious intrusion, revealed our character as relic hunters. The stranger host, overlooking the absence of 'sandal shoon and scallop shell,' welcomed us at once, with the same politeness that pilgrims have ever received in civilzed countries, and regretting that he had not even enough of the "true cross" to swear by—not an atom of a relic—sent us home to our supper with appetites considerably sharpened by the disappointment.

Returning, I diverged with one of the company from the direct road a little, to take a look at the U. States Arsenal. It lies on the banks of the Allegheny, and consists, together with the officer's quarters, of a number of handsome brick buildings painted cream color, and so arranged with regard to each other, that in connection with the improved grounds adjacent, they make quite an imposing appearance.

It was nearly dark when we got fairly into town, where the dust and smoke along the streets, with the rattling of drays, returning from their day's work to the suburbs, reminded me not a little of my own bustling city at nightfall. There is one sound, however, in the streets of Pittsburgh, which utterly forbids a stranger mistaking them for those of any other town on the continent. It is the ceaseless din of the steam engines. Every mechanic here of any pretension has one of these tremenduous journeymen at work in his establishment. They may be purchased for what would be the price of a pair of horses in N. York, and it costs a mere song to keep them in fuel.—These machines must do the work of a great many thousand men in Pittsburgh; and though I am hardly such a friend of universal suffrage as to think that these substitutes for men ought to be represented in the legislature, yet, upon my word, they should always be taken into consideration when estimating the population of the place, which their industrious labor renders so flourishing.

"Proud deeds these iron men have done."

The Boston Post mentions, as a coincidence, tha the 4th of July was the day on which Cromwell convened the first Parliament, under the English Commonwealth, in 1533, and asks whether the same day was not "selected by the American Cont gress for the Declaration of Independence from the political coincidence it presented." Certainly not. There was no selection in the case, and, if there had been, the American Congress would hardly have forgotten the change of style, by which the 4th of July, before 1752, in England, corresponds to the 23d of June, subsequently.

If, however, a coincidence had been looked for one would have been found much nearer our own times, and more likely to attract attention. The Albany Plan of Union, which was the first attempt at union among the Anglo American Colonies, was signed at Albany, by delegates, in Convention, on the 4th of July, 1754. Just previous to the last French war, that took place before the American Revolution, the British Board of Trade, anticipating the opening of hostilities, and anxious to put as much of the burden of the battle as possible upon the Colonies, recommended a confederation among the Colonies, for the purpose of mutual defence, and to make treaties with the Indians. This convention met at Albany, and drew up that celebrated Plan of Union—of which the author was Doctor Franklin—which had the singular fortune of being rejected by the King of Great Britain, on the ground that it claimed almost independence for the Colonies, and by some of the Colonies, particularly the General Assembly of Connecticut, because it conceded too much supremacy to Great Britain. The taxing power, which afterwards hastened the revolution, was detected by the vigilant New Englanders, in some of the provisions of the plan. This Convention was signed, as we have remarked, on the 4th of July, and is, therefore, as the first proposition for Union, a better coincidence to cite than the proceedings of Cromwell, some hundreds of years before.—Baltimore American, December 14.

COTTON MANUFACTURE, &c.

We extract from the forthcoming number of the Edinburgh Review, the following account of the Cotton Manufacture. We can answer for its perfect accuracy:—

The evidence taken by the Committee leaves no room for doubt as to the rapid advancement of the cotton manufacture, and the comfortable condition of most of those engaged in it. Mr. Bates, managing partner of the house of Baring, Brothers, & Co., perhaps the most extensive, and certainly one of the best informed merchants in the country, made a tour through some of the principal manufacturing districts in Spring last, at the time when the complaints of distress were at their acme.—Mr. Bates had not been in those parts of the country for some two or three years previously; and being asked by the Committee whether he was much struck at the increase of manufacture, &c., in the interval he answered—"Every thing in that part of the country seems to be increasing, resembling very much a new country; in Liverpool there are whole streets building, and every thing has the appearance of a new town about it; and I see a great difference in going along through Manchester and that part of the country; and in Yorkshire there seemed to me to be occasionally entire villages, just out of the hands of the mason, consisting of beautiful little cottages. * *

To my view, there never was so secure and healthy a state of things, whether you look to the present state of things here, or to the probable state of things for several years to come, supposing that every thing remains tranquil here, and that there is nothing to shake public confidence."—(Min. of Evidence, p., 49.) Mr. Kirkman Finlay, whose intimate acquaintance with the cotton trade, as well as with most departments of business, is too well known to require any notice of ours, informed the Committee, that though profits were "very moderate," the present character of the cotton trade was "one of great extension, and of a rapid sale and activity."—P., (36,) With respect to the condition of the work people employed in cotton factories, Mr. Finlay gave the following conclusive evidence: "The wages in the establishments with which I am conected, and, I believe generally through the country, are quite the same now, as they were many years ago; the employment at such establishments is regular and constant; it never varies; the prices do not vary; every body is paid according either to the work done by the individual himself, or according to the work done in the particular room in which he may work acording to the nature of the employments; and, therefore, the wages in such establishments being quite the same as they were many years ago, when the prices of provisions were a great deal higher than they are, it follows, as a natural consequence, that the laborers must be much better off now in such employment than they were at any period I can name for many years back."—(P., 37.) The evidence of other witnesses is to the same effect.

When we said there was but one part of the annual message which appeared to us to require serious condemnation, we of course did not mean to be considered as approving of that part of it which relates to the post office, which is rather calculated to provoke a smile than a frown. The report of the department, which accompanies the message, puts the best face it can upon the matter; but that face is but a mask, concealing, instead of disclosing, the true aspect of its affairs. Upon this topic we shall not enlarge, leaving it to those to whom it more properly belongs. We protest, however, against the attempts to trace the embarrassments of the post office to the former administration of it, as being ungenerous, unjust, and besides, impossible. When the present administrators of that department can restore that establishment to the condition in which it was left by their predecessors, we shall be the first to give them credit for it.—Nat. Intel.

Having, since our last, had an opportunity of obtaining some knowledge of the contents of the memorial of the four government directors of the bank of the United States, we are now enabled to state that it is an appeal to the house of representatives, in reply to parts of the report of the board of directors already published. We do not know what business these malcontent directors have to pour their complaints into the ear of the house.—But, their memorial having been solemnly received, and referred to a standing committee of the house, and that memorial being in further prosecution of the objects of the base conspiracy of the kitchen cabinet against this press, we have half a mind to prepare a counter memorial shewing up these government informers in their true light to the country, not all equally culpable, we believe, but co-operating nevertheless in a common purpose, the iniquity of which has not, perhaps, a parallel in modern history. We will think of it. —National Intelligencer.

The Albany Argus is already becoming alarmed. It begins to threaten. Any Member, it declares, who shall presume to vote for a restoration of the Deposits to the place where the law requires them to be kept, "SHALL BE MARKED!"

We have seen a letter from Washington, which stated, that the Kitchen Cabinet have abandoned the idea of bringing forward Blair, as a Printer to the House, in opposition to those respectable gentlemen, Messrs. Gales & Seaton. They discovered that the signs were not propitious, and they hope to gain more by letting the matter drop, than by submitting to a defeat, before the House, as they unquestionably would have done if they had brought the subject under consideration.

Another letter from an independent Jackson man, says, he has no doubt that before the termination of the session, a very different state of things will exist from the present. There is scarcely a doubt that the Kitchen Cabinet will be overthrown before the session ends.—N. Y. Gazette.

Ohio and Pennsylvania Junction Canal.—Our readers must have remarked the gathering force and intensity with which public feeling is concentrating, in favor of connecting our western line of canal with Ohio. It were strange indeed if there was any collision of sentiment as to the wisdom of a measure, the accomplishment of which, would not only bring large and rich additions to the revenue of Pennsylvania, by multiplying many fold the productions of her internal improvements, but would immediately and directly promote the prosperity of our citizens in the enlargement of their trade. All we have ever feared was, that there might not be the prompt, vigorous action, which not our wants merely, but our necessity demands. We welcome the spirit therefore with which Pennsylvania promises to respond to the invitation of our sister state to mingle their waters, and add our hearty concurrence in the views of our State Treasurer, Mr. Mahon, which we subjoin from his recent report to our legislature.—U. S. Gazette.

"In estimating the future productiveness of the public works, their intimate connection with those of the state of Ohio is viewed as a matter highly important. Fortunately, within a short period, the serious attention of the citizens of the commercial metropolis of the state has been awakened to the absolute necessity of this connection, to sustain and support its prosperity—and in the excitement produced, has had the most salutary effect, of originating measures which cannot fail to insure their speedy union, a communication which will verify the most sanguine calculations of the most ardent friends of internal improvement."

Extracts from the Review of the Philadelphia Market, for the week preceding Dec. 14, 1833.

COTTON—The operations have been very limited—25 bales at 15 1-2 cents—32 bales at 15 cents, 4 months. A small parcel of Uplands has been disposed of at 14 1-2 cents; 50 bales at 13 1-4 a 15 1-4; 10 bales Louisiana, at 16 cents.

COFFEE—The market continues very inactive. The sales embrace about 300 bags Rio at 12 1-2 cents.

FLOUR AND MEAL—The market is languid in consequence of the distress in the money market. About 1,200 bbls. of superfine flour have been taken at $5 50; 900 do. at $5 40-100, and other parcels at something less. Between 7 and 800 bbls. of rye at 3 5-8; 200 bbls. scraped at $5 12 1-2 a $5 25; 100 bbls. middling, $3 25 a $3 50.

RICE—Sales of this article have been very trifling. Several small parcels have been taken at 3 1-4 c., and represented as very dull.

SUGAR—We have nothing important to record; the business doing is very limited, and the quotations may be considered a fair criterion to judge of prices; small lot of white Havana at 10 3-4 c., 4 months.—U. S. Gaz.

FAIRBANK'S PLATFORM SCALES.

THESE scales are constructed upon an improved principle; are fitted up with great care by the manufacturers, and warranted to weigh with accuracy from half a pound to 12,000. Being placed in, and forming part of, the floor, the process of weighing is performed with ease and facility, while the space they occupy may be improved as a passage way or for other purposes.

The construction of these scales is such that they are little liable to derangement of wear, and their perfect operation will be guaranteed for any reasonable length of time.

The usual objection, that a new method of weighing cannot be safely entrusted to unskilful hands, is obviated by the use of the improved BALANCE, concerning which are the following remarks in the Journal of the Franklin Institute, of the state of Pennsylvania, for the promotion of the Mechanic Arts, for June, 1833. (Edited by Thos. P. Jones, M. D., late Superintendent of the Patent Office, at Washington, Professor of Mechanics in the Franklin Institute, &c.

"The Messrs. Fairbanks, some time since, obtained a patent for a Platform Weighing Machine, and this mode of adjuating and graduating the Beam of the Balance, and the weights, was devised by them with a view to its employment with the before mentioned machine. We have had an opportunity of examining one of their balances, and have been much pleased with it: this examination, however, was not necessary to the conviction that it possesses a just claim to the character of a real improvement, the whole arrangement being so simple as to enable any person to perceive that it is well adapted to the purpose contemplated, that of facilitating the business of weighing, and more especially of heavy articles."

The subscriber, as Agent, will receive orders for the above Scales, which will be made in this city to order. They can be seen at his Warehouse, No. 84, Front street.

Nov. 8, 1833. MOSES ATWOOD.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

THE Subscribers, Trustees of the New Philadelphia Society, at Phillipsburgh, Beaver county, Pennsylvania, offer for sale the following property, to wit:

1	tract of land	containing	330 acres
1	do	do	330
1	do	do	67
1	do	do	7
1	do	do	40
1	do	do	6

other lots, containing about

The above lands lie in one body, fronting about two miles upon the Ohio river—immediately opposite the mouth of Big Beaver creek, and the Beaver Division of the Pennsylvania Canal. The land is rich, and a part of it under a high state of cultivation—its location pleasant and healthy. The improvements upon the same are valuable, including the town of Phillipsburgh, late the residence of Count Leon, and the New Philadelphia Society. The town contains about 40 Dwelling Houses, now in order; some of them brick houses and two stories high. A large and spacious Hotel, a Store house, Church, a number of Shops, for mechanics, Stables, Barns, and other out houses. Also, two large new buildings, lately erected, but not yet finished, one of brick, the other of frame (the latter suitable for a manufactory) a very extensive public garden, and also fruit trees of various kinds. The property has also attached to it the right of a ferry across the Ohio, which is valuable, and becoming more so every day.

The above property is situated in the midst of a wealthy and prosperous country, distant about 28 miles below Pittsburgh, and one mile from Beaver, the seat of justice for Beaver county---and having a view for many miles up and down the Ohio, and of the country to a great distance around.

The subscribers are confident in saying that few situations could be found, presenting greater facilities to the farmer, mechanic, the manufacturer, and others--- a soil rich and productive---the neighborhood abounding in coal---well timbered and watered, and, by means of the Pennsylvania Canal, and steamboat navigation, a cheap and ready conveyance to market, and a communication with other places is ensured.

The property is susceptible of divisions into farms, or for the location of new towns, or for the extension of the present one.

Should it not be sold on or before the first day of January next, it will then be offered at public sale, upon the premises, to the highest and best bidder.

It will be sold in a body, or in parcels, to suit purchasers.

Terms of sale will be reasonable.

Information can be had by enquiring of the subscribers, two of whom live in the neighborhood, and one on the premises.

DOCTOR ROBERT'S

☞WELCH MEDICAMENTUM☜

FOR the cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Jaundice, Cholic, Fever and Ague, Dysentery, Headach, Loss of Appetite, Flatulence, Hypochondria, Hysterics, Dropsical Complaints, and Heartburn, It also prevents all Bilious disorders, and removes habitual Costiveness. Asthma, Strangury, Gravel, Rheumatism, Gout, and Impurities of the Blood.

A person who uses this Medicamentum will not require the use of the lancet, or any means of the healing art. It restores and revives the animal spirits, invigorates the system, removes nervous tremors, obtunds rheumatic and anthritic pains, and prevents their return. It cleanses the stomach of all morbid humors, which cause indigestion, acidities, headach, and lowness of spirits; cures all bilious disorders, and all cholics of the stomach and bowels, almost immediately; inspires cheerfulness; gives comfort to the dropsical; takes away palpitation of the heart; gives circulation to the blood; restores bloom to the sallow or sickly cheek, and plumpness to the meagre habit; purges without pain, and banishes all cause of fever of every kind. It acts on the stomach, that great reservoir of the human system, a diseased state of which causes all diseases. No alteration in the usual habits of life is required, but the abstaining from distilled ardent spirits.

CERTIFICATE,

From Rev. Derick Lansing, D. D., Pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church in Utica.

UTICA, Jan. 6, 1830.

To Dr. Hitchcock.—Dear Sir: I have always been one of the number of those who have placed little confidence in nostrums or specifics, and for this reason, although I saw your advertisement of the Welch Medicamentum, I could not bring my mind to consent to use it. My sufferings, from indigestion, during the past summer, were so severe, as materially to affect my comfort, and my capacity for usefulness. I have reason to thank you, sir, that, on hearing of the state of my health, you kindly sent me your Medicamentum. I have taken it faithfully, and with entire success. I have not been visited with one of those turns of distress, which before were weekly periodical, since I began to take your valuable medicine. Could I receive the same relief which I have hitherto experienced, on condition of taking it for life, I should cheerfully comply with such condition. Your's, very truly, D. C. LANSING.

ANTI-DYSPEPTIC ELIXER.

ONE of the most agreeable and efficacious Medicines ever discovered for the permanent cure of those chronic states of derangement of the stomach, constituting that miserable disease called Dyspepsia.

The basis of this Elixer s vegetables, and perfectly innocent in its operation; it destroys that sour state of the stomach, the instant it is taken, and stops the morbid secretion, by giving strength to the muscular fibre of that important organ, by which means the peristaltic motion of the intestines is increased, and the costiveness obviated; a new action is given to the system, which puts an end to a train of distressing nervous sensations.

Another form of the disease in which the Elixer is admirably calculated to relieve, is the decline of fever, where the stomach will not bear the ordinary strengthening medicines indicated in such cases, it has the surprising effect of giving vigor, and restoring the natural secretions of the body, without increasing the febrile state. Not the least danger is to be apprehended from exposure to cold, while under the use of this medicine, nor will it interrupt necessary employment of the patient a single hour.

☞A number of cases of cures performed by the Anti-Dyspeptic Elixer in the vicinity of Pittsburgh can be given.

GEO. W. CARPENTER'S
COMPOUND SYRUP OF LIVERWORT,

A SAFE and Valuable Medicine for Coughs, Spitting of Blood, Consumption, and Liver Complaints.

Most of the medicines made use of for the above diseases are of a stimulating nature, composed generally of Resins and Balsams, in alcoholic solutions, which, although sometimes giving temporary relief, in almost every instance where they are freely used, aggravate the disease, and reduce the strength of the patient.

This article possesses superior advantages over these preparations, its action being of a tonic, invigorating and strengthening nature, thus overcoming the disease by promoting expectoration, and gradually increasing the strength of the patient, and thus, without being attended with any unpleasant effects: it also agrees with the stomach, in a cases, and is a pleasant medicine to take.

TYPE FOUNDRY.

HAVING purchased of Mr. Richard Ronaldson, his long established and very extensive Type Foundry, the subscribers have formed a co-partnership for the purpose of continuing said business, and for the convenience of their friends and patrons, have removed their establishment to a more central part of the city. As it is their intention to keep on hand a good assortment of the best type, and to make such additions and improvements as the taste of the trade and the wants of the country require, they flatter themselves that this establishment will merit a large share of patronage. They have now several founts on hand, which can be furnished at a few hours' notice, and are prepared to make founts of all weights and sizes, from Pearl to 22 lines Pica, including a variety of Ornamental Letter. Their assortment of Cuts, Dashes, Brass Rule, and other Ornaments, will be found to be very extensive, of which specimens will be forwarded to Printers as soon as they can be prepared.

Printing Presses of every description, Printing Ink of the most approved qualities, Composing Sticks, Brass and Common Galleys, Chases, Imposing Stones, Cases, Paper and Press Boards, Standing Presses, Furniture, together with a complete assortment of all articles used in a Printing Office, will be kept constantly on hand.

Small founts, suitable for Book Binders, in great variety, may be had when called for.

Orders from all parts in the Union will be promptly and most carefully attended to, and particularly in supplying sorts for all founts furnished by their predecessors, Binny & Ronaldson, and Richard Ronaldson.

PATENT PLANING MACHINE.—The right to use this valuable machine, invented and patented by William Woodworth, and known as Woodworth's Patent Planing Machine, may be obtained on application to the subscriber for the counties of Allegheny, Butler, Beaver, Washington, Green, Fayette, Somerset, Cambria, Indiana, Jefferson, Clearfield, M'Kean, Warren, Venango, Mercer, Crawford, and Erie, in the State of Pennsylvania. That part of Maryland lying west of the Blue Ridge; all that part of Virginia lying west of the Blue Ridge, except the county of Ohio. The whole of the state of Ohio except the counties of Hamilton, Butler, and Montgomery. The whole of the state of Kentucky, except the counties of Jefferson, Boone, Oldham, Gallatin, and Campbell. The whole of Indiana, except the counties of Floyd, Clark, Jefferson, Dearborn, and Switzerland. The whole of the state of Illinois, and the territory of Michigan. Rights to use the machine in that part of the United States, named above, will be sold by the single county or in larger districts. As it is presumed that no one will purchase without seeing the machine at work, a description of it is deemed unnecessary. Should any person, however, wish to purchase, and find it inconvenient to visit the places where it is in operation, a machine will be furnished, warranted to plane, tongue and groove, and bring to an exact width and thickness, a white pine board of 12 feet long, and of any width from 1 to 14 inches, in one minute and ten seconds, or an oak board of the same dimensions in 2 minutes and 10 seconds. Machines may be seen at work in the cities of New Orleans, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, and others at the south and east, at Wheeling, Virginia, and at the saw mill of Messrs. Irwin & Herron, in this city.

Persons desiring to purchase will have the certificates of scientific and practical men who have seen it at work, in the different places in which it has been put up, forwarded to them. They give their opinion as to the great value of the invention, state the time they have seen boards dressed by this machine, and describe the quality of the work as compared with that performed by hand labor.
